

Shmuel Abramzon is an Israeli financial economist who is currently working as an Assistant Policy Analyst at the RAND Corporation and is a Doctoral Fellow at the Pardee RAND Graduate School. His work at RAND focuses on strategic socioeconomic policy planning, energy policy, sovereign debt management, and international development.

Prior to joining RAND, Abramzon served as a senior economist in the National Economic Council at the Prime Minister's Office in Israel. While there, Abramzon was part of a team that advised the Prime Minister on economic matters and formulated medium and long-term economic plans for the State of Israel. His specializations include financial markets, macroeconomic policy, and budgeting. He was a member of the 2009 Macroeconomic Policy Team of the Caesarea Forum, Israel's most influential economic policy conference. He has also worked as an economist in the Israel Debt Management Unit, which was involved with managing the government's debt portfolio and maintaining the State's relationship with international credit rating agencies.

Abramzon holds an M.A. in Financial Economics and a B.A. (magna cum laude) in Philosophy, Economics and Political Science from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.
