

Bio	Dr Hooman Motamed is a disaster risk specialist with more than 8 years of experience in multi-hazard multi-sectoral multi-level catastrophe risk assessment, disaster risk reduction, disaster risk financing and transfer, disaster data collection and management, and climate change adaptation. Having a PhD in earthquake engineering, he has obtained his second master's in insurance and risk management from Cass Business School, University of London. Currently, Hooman is assistant professor in the Research Centre for Risk Management at the International Institute of Earthquake Engineering and Seismology (IIEES), where he manages research projects in the areas of DRM, DRR, and disaster insurance.
	 A portrait of Dr. Hooman Motamed, a man with a beard and glasses, wearing a grey blazer over a white shirt and blue jeans. He is standing with his arms crossed in front of a dark background, possibly a doorway or window.